Outline

1. Before the interview
2. Beginning
3. Main section
4. End
5. Final advice
6. Online formats
Before the interview: Preparation

1. Intensive preparation
   - of standard questions
   - comprehensive research on company and position: information on the employer (homepage), industry, competitors, market situation, products
   - Who will be my interview partner?
   - Reflect on why you want this position and why you are a great candidate for it.
   - Prepare your self presentation
   - Collect examples and arguments

2. Be aware of organizational matters!
   - Plan how to travel to the interview venue
   - Bring copies of the most important documents
   - Get enough sleep, eat and drink before the interview.
   - Wear a suitable outfit! (Company dress code, tidy and clean, be aware for your body language)
Before the interview: Typical outline of a job interview

1. Beginning: Greeting and small talk

2. Getting to know the applicant
   - self presentation
   - motivation

3. Qualification and suitableness
   - Requirements – competences (usually deducted from your CV)

4. Description of position and questions

5. Parting/farewell
Beginning: Self presentation of applicant

Common questions at the beginning:

Your (career) history

“Please give us an overview of the most important stages in your CV to date.”
“Please tell us something about you, what you have done until now and where you want to be in 10 years.“

- Do not expect that the interviewer knows your CV by heart!
- Only give relevant information
- Chronological order: Start with your education, continue with your practical experience and finish with your goals and plans (max. 5 minutes)
- There should be a red line.
- You should “sell“ yourself, but don't exaggerate.
- Prepare an “Elevator pitch“.
- Always keep an eye on the benefit for your counterpart!
Beginning: Self presentation of applicant

Questions about your CV, for example gaps or unclear information:

“Why did you decide for this field of studies?”
“What was your main focus of studies?”
“What else have you done during your studies?”
“Why did you decide for this internship?”

Questions about your motivation

…and tell us your motivation to apply at our company.”
“Why is this position interesting to you?”
“Why are you applying for this job?”
  − Give a believable reason
  − Interest in products/services?
  − Previous experiences?
  − Never talk bad about third parties (old employer, competing company)
  − Give “Win-Win“ reason, do not only think about your own benefit
Main section: Qualifications and suitability
- Questions about professional skills and personality

Questions related to qualifications and suitability are based on the requirements for the position (see job advert).

For preparation, think about how you can fulfill the requirements → Matching requirements and competencies

“Do you have experience in organizing events? What kind of event was that?”

During my job as Hiwi at the International Office, I organized an event with 80 participants. I was responsible for…

Think about these points for preparation:

What are the requirements for this position?
What could the interviewer ask? Which answer could I give?
Main section: Qualifications and suitability

Situational questions

Assumption that there is a close relation between declared intention for action and the real action later pursued. Applicants are asked how they would act in specific situations:

“What would you do, if...?“

Questions about behavior in situations which determine success:

“Your boss wishes to not be disturbed. How do you deal with undesired visitors or callers?“

“Imagine you are receiving a task or order which seems inappropriate and counterproductive. How do you act?“

“The performance of one your co-workers declined, as a result the success of your project is in danger. How do you act in this situation?“
Main section: Qualifications and suitability

Biography related questions

To estimate your reaction to a given situation, biography related questions are used. The asset of biography related questions is the fact that they relate to real events and can therefore

- Show ways of reaction of the applicant
- Allow to understand how the applicant usually addresses problems
- Prevent the applicant from giving answers “from the book“ instead of authentic reactions
Main section: Qualifications and suitability

Examples for biography related questions

Dealing with conflicts:

“In some situations, you cannot make everybody happy. Please tell us a situation in your own life when you made this experience with your fellow students, friends or in work groups.“

Supporting questions: “How did you deal with this situation?“
“Which were the reactions of the affected persons?”

Ability to work in a team:

“When was the last time you have worked in a team?“

Supporting questions: “Which role did you play in the team? What was positive? What was less positive? What would you do differently the next time?"
Main section: Qualifications and suitability

Questions about strengths and weaknesses

Think about weaknesses which will not effect the success of the work you are asked to do in the position:

An accountant who gets bored if he has to do the same process over and over again.

A consultant who does not like to travel.
Main section: Qualifications and suitability

Questions about strengths and weaknesses

- be authentic
- name a success strategy or development perspective in dealing with your weaknesses

Success strategy:
“It happened in the past that I got lost in details while working on a complex task. Now I make sure to get an overview first and draft a working plan."

Development perspective:
“I am often scared to speak German even though I can speak it well. To overcome this fear, I agreed with my German flatmate to only speak German in our flat."

Toning it down with „but“
“I usually need a while to get fully awake in the morning, BUT I am very productive in the afternoon."

Strengths should be supported by giving an example.
Main section: Brainteaser

“How often per day are the two clock hands overlapping?”
“How many diapers are sold in Germany per year?”

These questions aim to examine your resilience, problem solving abilities, creativity, understanding and logical thinking.

How do you react when you have to solve a complex question? These questions are not about knowing the right answer, but how you approach the problem to find a solution.

- Think outside the box
- Think critical
- Try to find unusual solutions

Important: These questions are not about the right solution, but developing a working strategy.
Main section: Brainteaser

1. Analyze
   Take your time and analyze the question/task. The first analysis is important for understanding and planning the approach. Nobody expects you to rush this point.

2. Ask back to clarify
   Ask your interviewer back, if some points of the question/task are unclear.

3. Summarize the situation
   Summarize the situation briefly in your own words to clarify the structure for your and the interviewers. Then you start with working on a solution.

4. Express your way to find a solution
   Speak the thoughts about your approach to find a solution aloud so your interviewer can follow your approach.

5. Explain your outcome
   Present your outcome and explain how you have found this conclusion.
Main section: Stress questions

“You can't convince me with your skills since they are rather average. I assume you think the same?”

Keep calm and show confidence – take your time.

Five useful tips for stress questions

1. Expect/prepare for this kind of questions.

2. Don't regard difficult questions or provocative remarks as personal offences.

3. Don't act offended or aggressive, don't act shy or very insecure.

4. Don't try to be very witty or funny.

5. Don't let these questions get to you! Your application convinced the recruiter to invite you for the interview, so your qualifications match the requirements. Otherwise they would not have invited you.
Main section: Prohibited questions

– questions about your relationships or family
– questions about your health
– questions about your sexual orientation
– questions about membership in a union, political party or religious organisation
– questions about your financial situation
– questions about why you left your previous jobs
– questions about previous salaries (although you can use it to argue for your salary expectations)
– questions about a criminal record (only for certain positions)

“Do you have children or plan children in the near future?“

Keep calm and answer in an evasive way:

→ “At the moment I am focusing on my career and am looking forward to start a job."
End: Your questions – What questions can I ask to clearly show my interest?

Possible examples:

- In which department of the company is the position located?
- Which areas of responsibility will have the highest priority?
- What are your goals in filling this position?
- What further training opportunities are there?
- In your opinion, what strengths should an applicant have for this position?
- Which career and development opportunities are there?
- When can I expect your decision?

Consider carefully which questions
- are of interest for you.
- are relevant for the position and the company.
Final advice

- Be honest and critical of yourself
- Use specific examples, preferably from internships or studies
- Development perspective: What have you learned?

Dealing with nervousness

- Accept nervousness!
- Test run: Ask someone to conduct an interview with you
- Don’t forget to breathe, drink enough
Online formats: Video Interview per Skype

Preparation:
- Check your internet connection, microphone/speaker, lightning.
- Start your computer early and close all other programs.
- Prepare all important documents and utensils. You should not leave your seat during the call.
- Dress adequately for an interview.
- Make sure there is no background noise or visual distraction.
- Choose the background carefully.

During the interview
- Speak clearly, pay attention to delays in transmission - let the other party finish speaking.
- Be present and be sure to look into the camera. Unnecessary movements distract.
- You can take notes (by hand).
Online formats: The time-shifted video interview

- A link to the video interview will be sent by email. With this you can log in and do the interview on your own.
- There is no direct contact with the applicant during the interview. He/she alone decides when and where he/she would like to conduct the interview independently within a specified interview period.
- The applicant is given the opportunity to check the technical details in advance and is guided step by step through the interview.
- There is a preparation and response time for each question. The questions are displayed on the screen and the candidate's answers are automatically recorded on the webcam.
- Recording is done only while the applicant is answering. Questions as well as preparation and response times of the video interview are fixed and are the same for all invited applicants.

→ The time-shifted video interview does not replace the classic interview. It helps companies to get a meaningful impression of the applicant flexibly and cost-effectively.
Thank you!
