

Field School “Remembrance as Reconciliation: the Dark Histories of Canada and Germany”

“Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it”, the Spanish Philosopher George Santayana famously wrote – a potent directive to remember especially those parts of our national histories that offer no cause for celebration. In Germany, the time period of National Socialism, the so-called Third Reich, with its genocide of Europe’s Jewish population is one of those dark chapters. While the immediate response after World War II was characterized by silencing and denial, since the late 1960s this history is prominently confronted on many levels – in education, but also in the public spaces through memorials or remembrance days, and of course in cultural production. Its constant presence powerfully affects German identity, stifling overt displays of patriotism (outside sports, the one area where this is permissible) and continuing to determine what can or cannot be said or done. Canada as a nation has much more recently started to confront the legacies of its residential school system, the ethnocidal educational policy to eradicate First Nation, Inuit, and Métis cultures, which still affects survivors, their families and cultures. While the discoveries of countless graves on the grounds of former residential schools dominate the news cycle and social media, institutional remembrance is still in the process of taking shape.

This field school – co-taught by Profs. Jade Ferguson and Eva Gruber – brings together students from the University of Guelph and the University of Konstanz in Germany’s South in order to enable dialogue and discussion about forms, functions, aims, and effects of national remembrance in the respective context. Against the backdrop of German forms of remembrance, we will analyze cultural productions from Canada which engage with the residential school system, its history and legacy. Questions to be asked include: How can/do we remember in ways that do not downplay the extent of the trauma caused, but also do not reduce survivors to victims? How can/do we remember so that those affected are not simply “spoken about” but have a voice of their own? How can/do we remember in ways that, through awareness of past mistakes, affects our current actions, attitudes, and policies? How can we look at the past in ways that open a path into the future that allows for true reconciliation?

We will explore short fiction, graphic novels, dance performances, art, short films, survivors’ testimonies, short plays, and poetry to see how they narrativize and/or visualize the residential school experience and its long-term effects. Our discussions will be framed by theoretical texts on trauma narratives and cultural memory, and documents such as the report of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission. The program will include visits to the Memorial Site of Dachau (near Munich), where one of the first concentration camps was located, and Konstanz City Museum’s permanent exhibition on Konstanz during National Socialism.

Preliminary Program

Saturday, May 25	Departure from Guelph
Sunday, May 26	Arrival in Konstanz, Check-in at the Youth Hostel
Monday, May 27	Session 1 (10am-3.30 pm, lunch break 12.30-1.30)            Introductions/Self Positioning            Establishing theoretical framework, central issues and terminology (residential school history, trauma studies, reconciliation and the role which culture plays in this process)            Forming Teams, Project Distribution 7pm Tour of the City: Traces of Jewish Life in Konstanz
Tuesday, May 28	Session 2 (10am-4 pm, lunch break 12.30-1.30)            Discussion on cultural memory and memorializing traumatic periods in the respective national context            Project conceptualization            Research and discussion in teams 4 students each (mixed groups of Guelph and Konstanz students) on the respective projects, brief reports/exchanges about the progress 4.45 pm Visit to the Rosgarten Museum Konstanz, Guided Tour through the section on Konstanz during National Socialism
Wednesday, May 29	Session 3 (10am-4 pm, lunch break 12.30-1.30)            Continued research and discussion in teams on the respective projects, brief reports/exchanges about the progress 5 pm Canoe Trip in the Mainau Bay, Barbeque at the University's "Water Sports" area
Thursday, May 30 (Holiday)	10 am Trip to Meersburg by ferry, guided tour of the old castle, walk through the vineyards
Friday, May 31st	Session 4 (10am-3 pm, lunch break 12.30-1.30)            Finishing research and discussion in teams on the respective projects, creating presentations
Saturday, June 1	8.30 am Trip to Munich, visit to Dachau Concentration Camp Memorial Site
Sunday, June 2	Break – spending time at the lake

Monday, June 3	Session 5 (10am-4 pm, lunch break 12.30-1.30) Project presentations and discussions teams 1-3
Tuesday, June 4	Session 6 (10am-4 pm, lunch break 12.30-1.30) Project presentations and discussions Teams 3-6
Wednesday, June 5	Session 6 Final Discussion, Wrap Up  6 pm Farewell Dinner at Seekuh (in town)
Thursday, June 6	Check-out and departure for Guelph